BACKSTORY

Bodhi began more than 30 years ago, founded by my mother Lee-Leng Whong as Australia's first vegan yum cha restaurant in 1988. I took over the reins in 2000 to bring Bodhi into the new century with a more modern take and a new location in Sydney's Cook + Phillip Park.

The Bodhi of today is much more than a restaurant. It has become a community hub for a new generation, embraced by likeminded people from all walks of life who share Bodhi's "do no harm" philosophy and passion for acceptance, protecting the planet and living conciously.

Australia's longest running and largest vegan venue, Bodhi is just as popular with vegans as with non-vegans, with yum cha lunch and a la carte dinner experiences bustling with everyone from monks to models, lawyers to lifesavers.

It is such a privilage to bring Bodhi to life in so many different ways each day, as a celebration of life and good food with friends, surrounded by ancient Moreton Bay fig trees and lush parklands in the centre of the city.
